BAE Systems komited sedia penyelesaian pertahanan

BAE Systems akan mempamerkan penyelesaian teknologi, pertahanan dan keselamatan terkininya pada Pameran Perkhidmatan Pertahanan Asia (DSA) tahun ini.

Ruang pameran BAE Systems akan menampilkan model Eurofighter Typhoon, pesawat tempur pelbagai guna serta Hawk Trainer Jet.

Hawk ketika ini digunakan oleh Tentera Udara Diraja Malaysia (TUDM) manakala Eurofighter Typhoon sedang dipertimbangkan sebagai pesawat pejuang pantas akan datang.

Turut ditampilkan adalah model

Archer Artillery System, senapan ringan 105mm dan L118, L118 Light dan Kapal Peronda BAE System.

Antara tumpuan utama ruang pameran BAE Systems di Pusat Dagangan dan Pameran Antarabangsa Malaysia (MITEC) adalah paparan siber interaktif yang membolehkan pengunjung meneroka cara BAE Systems Applied Intelligence mampu melindungi negara ini.

DSA pada tahun ini menyaksikan komitmen BAE System kepada Program Biasiswa Chevening.

Selepas menaja lebih 50 pelajar

pasca siswazah sejak 2012, BAE Systems kekal antara penyumbang terbesar kepada Program Chevening di Malaysia dan komitmen baharu itu akan memastikan lebih ramai rakyat Malaysia akan mendapat manfaat program ini pada masa depan.

BAE Systems dan CyberSecurity Malaysia (CSM) juga akan memeterai memorandum persefahaman (MoU) yang akan menyaksikan kerjasama dilanjutkan bagi mengukuhkan lagi hubungan yang menyumbang kepada keselamatan siber di negara ini.

Yakin tinjauan perindustrian di Malaysia

Pengarah Urusan Asia Tenggara BAE Systems, John Brosnan, berkata DSA menawarkan peluang besar untuk terus mengukuhkan hubungan antara syarikat itu dengan rakan perniagaannya di Malaysia dan seluruh rantau Asia.

"Kami yakin dengan tinjauan perindustrian di Malaysia dan percaya bahawa DSA adalah forum terbaik untuk mempamerkan kepayaan syarikat dari segi kejuruteraan aeroangkasa, keselamatan siber dan pendidikan yang semuanya dicapai melalui kerjasama tempatan.

"Sebagai sebuah organisasi, ketika ini kami mempunyai 400 pekerja di Malaysia dan sumbangan ekonomi syarikat sudah mewujudkan tambahan 7,000 pekerjaan di seluruh negara. Kami berbangga menjadi sebahagian pertumbuhan Malaysia," katanya.

BAE Systems sudah menyokong perniagaan di Malaysia dan Angkatan Tentera Malaysia (ATM) dengan pelbagai penyelesaian sama ada di darat, laut, udara dan pertahanan siber selama lebih 50 tahun melalui ibu pejabatnya di Kuala Lumpur.

HALAL CERTIFICATION

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN HALAL AND HALALAN-TOYYIBAN

Apply halalan-toyyiban to other areas in halal industry in line with Malaysia's goal of being the global hub

HALAL is an Arabic word connoting a state of permissibility for objects or actions according to Syariah principles.

The Quran states that: "Eat of what is on earth, lawful and good" (2:168). This verse implies that humanity is expected to eat, use and act in accordance with what is not only permissible but also good, pure or wholesome. The verse expresses the godly commandment using two important words, namely "halal" and "toyyib".

It is common in the halal market for people to use the terms halal and halalan-toyyiban interchangeably due to a perception that whatever is halal, is also halalan toyyiban. But actually, the two terms carry two different meanings. The former implies compliance with fundamental Syariah parameters, while the latter goes beyond those fundamentals to invoke enhanced features that make something good, pure and wholesome.

For example, junk food that comply with halal certification requirements are certified as halal. Such certification tells the world that these products do not contain items prohibited by the Syariah while simultaneously complying with the specified legal provisions prescribed by the law of the land. But, although, they are certified as such, eating junk food is unhealthy and could lead to many health issues. Thus, halal certified junk food are halal, but not toyyib.

In Malaysia, the concept of halalan-toyyiban has gained only limited exposure, be they from the perspective of public understanding or in terms of practical application within the halal market itself. From the regulatory perspective, for instance, the laws and regulations related to this concept seems very limited in comparison to those governing the halal concept.

The Manual Procedure for Malaysia Halal Certification 2014, issued by the Department of Islamic Development, Malaysia (Jakim), and 13 other standards on halal issued by the Department of Standards, Malaysia (DOSM), are all focused on halal alone. This might be due to the fact that Malaysia's current halal certification scheme does not include halalan-toyyiban.

However, there are three areas that require compliance with halalan-toyyiban standards: transportation of goods, cargo chain activities (MS 2400 (1):2010); warehousing and other related activities (MS 2400 (2): 2010); and retailing (MS 2400 (3)).

The three sets of standards specified in the respective parenthesis are the requirements on halalan-toyyiban assurance pipelines, issued in 2010.

These three sets of standards define halal as "things or action which are permitted or lawful in Islam. It conveys basic meaning and defines the standards of acceptability in accordance to Syariah requirements". Halalan-toyyiban, on the other hand, is defined as "assurance and guarantee that both aspects of halalan and toyyiban are integrated into holistic and balanced requirements that fulfil the condition, situation and application needs".

Based on these two definitions, it may be concluded that halal represents the fulfilment of the Syariah requirements leading to the permissibility of an object or action while halalan-toyyiban covers a more holistic approach. Therefore, a clearer demarcation between the two concepts is required within the halal industry.

The halalan-toyyiban concept is seen as a more comprehensive method that seeks to achieve international standards compliance, making it universally acceptable. Hence, more efforts need to be invested by the relevant parties to promote the integration of halal and toyyiban in Malaysia's halal certification scheme. Although there has been an effort to apply this concept by issuing the three standards on halalan-toyyiban, the current application of this concept is still limited to these three areas.

Since Malaysia aspires to become the global halal hub, it is timely to extend the application of halalan-toyyiban to other areas in the halal industry. Introducing another scheme of halal certification, such as "halalan-toyyiban certification", would be a good start. It would encourage the halal market players to produce products or services that are not only halal certified but also contain wholesome elements.

For instance, nutritious products that contain halal ingredients and at the same time do not contain any substance that could endanger human health and life, may be certified as "halalan-toyyiban" by the certifying authority upon fulfilment of all requirements set under the relevant halalan-toyyiban standards.
