Vaccine Developments

The University of Oxford's Com-COV vaccine trial found that mixing Covid-19 vaccines made by Pfizer-BioNTech and AstraZeneca-Oxford produces a better immune response than two doses of the same vaccine brand.

The doses in the trial, however, were given four weeks apart, rather than the 8- to 12-week schedule most commonly used for the AstraZeneca vaccine.

In another report, University of Oxford researchers said last Monday that a third shot of the Oxford-AstraZeneca Covid-19 vaccine produces an enhanced immune response, adding that there was not yet evidence, however, that such shots were needed, especially given the shortages in some countries.

Zuellig Pharma, Moderna Inc's supply partner for Covid-19 vaccines in Southeast Asia, said last Tuesday that regional orders for Moderna's vaccines were almost fully booked for this year, highlighting procurement challenges for countries slow off the mark. Zuellig CEO John Graham told Reuters there would be some availability towards the end of this year.

Neither Pfizer Inc nor any of its affiliates globally has authorised anyone to import, market or distribute the Pfizer-BioNTech Covid-19 vaccine and currently, there is no authorised private distributor of the vaccine worldwide, Pfizer Malaysia said in a statement last Thursday.

Malaysia will shorten the dosing interval for the AstraZeneca vaccine to nine weeks from 12 weeks previously, says National Covid-19 Immunisation Programme coordinating minister Khairy Jamaluddin. He says this was the recommendation made to the Special Committee on Covid-19 Vaccine Supply by its technical working group. As at midnight last Thursday, opt-in participants had begun to receive their second vaccination appointments.
