Tackling unemployment via remote work job portal

KOTA KINABALU: profit social organisation Genashtim has teamed up with Sabah Creative Economy and Innovation Centre (SCENIC) to help Sabahans find remote work via a specialised online career search tool.

Launched in August, the Jobs-10G platform aims to link job seekers with potential employers not only within the nation, but also across Asia-Pacific.

Endorsed by SCENIC, the specialised job-seeking portal aspires to assist those, who Genashtim Chief Executive Officer Thomas Ng said they would work with SCENIC to support Sabah people in maximising internet use, specifically in accessing work opportunities.

"We can only recruit a limited number of people from marginalised groups with the resources we have. We can however, replicate this with Jobs-10G by encouraging other organisations to tap into these undervalued individuals."

"Society will advance if more undervalued individuals.

"Society will advance if more firms recruit and empower these hidden and forgotten workforce. This then will eventually lead to nation-building," he said, inviting interested jobseekers and

Thomas noted deserving applicants from Sabah would benefit from Genashtim training that is designed to prepare them for the remote work environment.

Thus, they will be better

"Thus, they will be better equipped with the necessary skill sets so they can take advantage of employment opportunities from both local and global companies that post job openings at the Jobs-10G platform," he added.

Meanwhile, SCENIC General Manager Viviantie Sarjuni said the partnership initiative fits perfectly with their mission to connect globally competent talents to various stakeholders and to create greater impact.
This project, she stressed, aims
